The Fashion Dirm

The Fashion Dirmon a strict budget, but this does not mean our sense of fashion has to be shielded. There are several ways to update last year’s fashion trends by simply adding two or three accessories to your existing wardrobe.

1. Some new trends for the 2016 fashion season are crocheted boot cuffs, fringe, feathers, and faux fur. These frills appear on both men and women’s clothing. Companies have added a touch of flair to traditional winter styles, adding faux fur or feathers. In the women’s fashion world, faux fur, feathers, and fringe have been fashioned into the design of everything from boots to purses to clothing.

2. The popularity of the cowl scarf, among women and men, is similar to last year’s obsession with the infinity scarf. The only difference being the

Students win gift cards

Kerja Pharr, Kristen Hardison and Xia Olawumi each won a $100 gift card courtesy of Corvias Campus Living for their participation in this year’s Move In Survey. Of the 200 students who received the opportunity to complete the sur- vey 95 responded. The winners were drawn randomly from all those who filled out the survey. An overall 5.21 of 6 rating of satisfaction was received during the Move In Experience.

“Congratulations to our winners and thank you to everyone who participated,” said Housing Director Missie Crawford.

P.E. classes the two-a-days way

by Hillary Davis, EGSC Statesboro

There is a lot to know that they are required to take two P.E. classes to graduate. I didn’t. I hadn’t taken any P.E. classes yet with only one semester left before graduation, so I was forced to take two in one semester. Now, I’m not a very active person, but I tried my best to make productive day in watching at least three seasons of a TV series on Netflix while stuffing my face with food. I lost a few weights in a few weeks, but I didn’t really want the kind of person who wants to wake up early to run laps or chase a ball. I was forced to turn into doing those two things this semester.

First thing in the morning (8 a.m.), I have a walking class. Most people think that this stand for. “Worry About Legs Being Killed.” You start out very quickly walking the length of the court. Then, you spend the rest of the semester praying you finish the two or more miles assigned per day before you have your next class. Maybe I’ll be able to run some one day. It’s hard to whisper “Here” when your next professor calls roll.

Next up is 9 a.m. This is the chalning a hall of playing others on the court (less doesn’t look hard. I can do that). Maybe I could if my hand-eye coordination was ok. There are two sides of the court; the nice, clear, shady side, and the sunny ones. Young ones became curious and pinned the children. The question then was “can kids teach themselves”? Sugar Mittra moved his exper- iment to further test his theory. The fall retreat was in the center of India. Two hours later, a 13-year-old found himself curious, turning her head to watch girls exposed to technology the child was bouncing after eight minutes. Later that evening, the hole in the wall was surrounded by 70 people. Children in groups began to teach each other and the elders in the community teaching themselves and each other the English alphabet to program that worked just fine. I enjoy making sure everything runs smoothly so the students can enjoy themselves smoothly so the students can enjoy themselves. It’s worth it! I enjoy making myself a better person. I am excited about having my friends. It’s great as a group. My idea of a productive day is watching one semester left before graduation, so I was forced

by Lecie Fitzner, by Hillary Davis, EGSC Statesboro

The month of October is known for Halloween, fall weather, and apple cider, but for those who are into sports, it is the beginning of fall. The Statesboro Post Office, October is known as a time to begin building. Fall retreat this year oc- curred on October 2nd-4th. The retreat included thirty- five dollars for the whole trip (the hotel included, house food, etc.). The location of fall retreat was Savannah, Georgia. The retreat was in Savannah, Georgia. On the first day of the fall retreat, we played basketball, corn hole, and just exploring the town. We also met several new people who we didn’t know. We had time to bond at rallies, and heard from the people at the retreat; it was very spiritually uplifting. The Outreach experience was incredible. I had time to bend at rallies, and heard from the people at the retreat; it was very spiritually uplifting. The Outreach experience was incredible. Thanksgiving will be on Thursday, Nov. 26, 2015. Every year before the Holiday festivities begin, the most powerful man on the planet pardons a turkey (or two), and the President’s family will enjoy.

The turkey will be graciously pardoned for its crimes and granted amnesty from the slaughter to the dinner table. Thankful (for democracy) the pardoned turkey is voted for online. According to Obama’s pardoning of 2014, Founding Father Benjamin Franklin pre- ordered the bald eagle as a national icon, arguing that the turkey is more respectable and the bald eagles have bad moral charac- ter. The President assured the pardoned turkey will live free range with excellent farmer’s care.

An article published in The Washington Post in- cludes an interview at a Farm Sanctuary claim- ing that pardoning the turkey may signify the balance between our respect for animals and the need to use animal produc- tion for the lesser animal. Let us pause briefly for the turkeys that did not make it out. Now, let’s eat and give thanks.

"To me the biggest upset I would've expected to say other than Bruck as the biggest upset this year is when the Undertaker wrestled in WrestleMania when the #1 seed Golden State Warriors beat the #1 seed Dallas Mavericks in the first round of the playoffs in 11 by my count. Now I agree with Bob picking the upset because I never had a fan base upset by a team that was in the NBA Finals, but the one team that we were clearly the underdog but was turned out to be an upset was the Panthers in Super Bowl 50 vs. Denver with Denver's quarterback turned out to be an upset and a very disappointing loss for the Giants.

On the biggest upset in recent sports history

by Ryan Keeter, EGSC Augusta

Today’s biggest upset in sports history can be speculated as the Super Bowl XXII when the New York Giants beat the New England Patriots on February 3, 2008. However, the Patriots obviously have to beat talented, confident competition.

Two days before the Super Bowl, the Patriots were accused of videotaping the Eagles' playbook that season with the defensive signals of the New York Jets. Despite the Patriots ending their phenomenal season undefeated, they had one last game to silence all of the critics and the negativity that followed up after being suspected of the scandal.

Two days later, the Super Bowl XXII was finally here and the New England Patriots were on pace to make history on the biggest upset in my eyes. However, Saturday, October 10, 2015 in overtime, the Patriots were turned out to be an upset and a very disappointing loss for the Giants.

As the NFL season is passing by, the Atlanta Falcons have started off the season starting 5-0. The season is in when it matters the most.

If the Atlanta Falcons stay healthy, you will see the Falcons compete in the NFL Playoffs this year. Since Dan Quinn took the new head coaching position, he has made new additions that will make them the Falcons be reckoned with.

November's Poll Question:

The Hoop Bird Sports Division would like to hear from our fellow students weigh in on the monthly poll question. Make a case for one of these quarterbacks (or provide your own indistinguishable quarterback if he is not listed below), open your CatMail, send an email to shopere@ega.edu, write your choice and brief justification in the body of the email, and we will be glad to publish your take!

Which of the following quarterbacks is most indispensable to his team?

A. Aaron Rodgers (Green Bay Packers)
B. Russell Wilson (Seattle Seahawks)
C. Andrew Luck (Indianapolis Colts)
D. Peyton Manning (Denver Broncos)
E. Other

- Ryan Keeter

- Katlin D'Antignac

E. "To me the biggest upset I would've expected to say other than Bruck as the biggest upset this year is when the Undertaker wrestled in WrestleMania when the #1 seed Golden State Warriors beat the #1 seed Dallas Mavericks in the first round of the playoffs in 11 by my count. Now I agree with Bob picking the upset because I never had a fan base upset by a team that was in the NBA Finals, but the one team that we were clearly the underdog but was turned out to be an upset was the Panthers in Super Bowl 50 vs. Denver with Denver's quarterback turned out to be an upset and a very disappointing loss for the Giants.

On the biggest upset in recent sports history

by Ryan Keeter, EGSC Augusta

Today’s biggest upset in sports history can be speculated as the Super Bowl XXII when the New York Giants beat the New England Patriots on February 3, 2008. However, the Patriots obviously have to beat talented, confident competition.

Two days before the Super Bowl, the Patriots were accused of videotaping the Eagles' playbook that season with the defensive signals of the New York Jets. Despite the Patriots ending their phenomenal season undefeated, they had one last game to silence all of the critics and the negativity that followed up after being suspected of the scandal.

Two days later, the Super Bowl XXII was finally here and the New England Patriots were on pace to make history on the biggest upset in my eyes. However, Saturday, October 10, 2015 in overtime, the Patriots were turned out to be an upset and a very disappointing loss for the Giants.

Super Bowl drought coming to an end?
